

Tribute to his wife Millie

Dear Wife: May the Lord grant that you may hear and understand our expression of love, thanks and appreciation to you. May you understand that nothing in heaven or earth is more near to my heart than you. Your life and service has been that of a Saint, and a most devoted mother. Dear Wife, I love you. As a young girl of 18, pure sweet and clean, you came into my life; and as a young sweet mother of 40, you leave us for that great beyond, unspotted, from all the errors and sins of the world. Through the atonement and gospel of Christ, your salvation is now made sure, and happiness and joy will be yours forever and ever.

Dear Mother! Dear Wife! Nothing can take your place. Your love, devotion, toil with and for us, has been unceasing, and now you have gone to the great beyond where sorrow and suffering from the evil source can touch you no more. But your mission with us is not yet done. We feel your influence, love and interest in us as ever before, and our lives, acts and service for and to each other and the cause of God, shall forever be as though you always were by our side, and approved everything we do. And with me, dear wife, in my creative work of art, you will be with me more than ever before, and the many duties to our children and home, I will gladly do. I will plant flowers you asked me to, and watch the childrens' many needs. So my darling, with our dear boy who went before you, be happy forever more. And if you then approve my devotion and I can come there pure and true as you, and if reward then should be granted, the highest wish will be eternal reunion with all our dear children, and you.
